THE most important question dealt with it the report of the Postmaster-General for 188 is the need of more space for the work of Thursday for this port. the Post Office and for an increased staff to do that work. Mr. Lister shows that in twelve years, while the work of the Post Office has nearly doubled-the amount of that port for Manila. correspondence passing through it having quite doubled-the staff is so little larger A description of Chinese Festivals, Fasts, &c., that the total salaries paid in 1887 amount the latter has been postboned. Yet in spite of the growth of the work no ad dition has been made to the English staff, from becoming the focus of disease? hadly as it is needed. The accommodation at the Post Office is also undoubtedly too limited: when the building was erected it was sufficient for the requirements, but the comic opera "The Sorcerer" at the Theatre designers had not sufficient prescience to foresee the immense development in the trade of the port and the enormous increase that would pari passu take place in the Postal business. Whether the addition another storey to the existing structure would meet the case, or whether a new building [5 p.m. The following is the programme:will be required, we are not in a position to say, but it seems tolerably clear that among the public works needed in the not distant future a new Post Office or enlarge-

No one sees more clearly than Mr. LISTER that the service is inadequate to the requirements of the times and the necessities of the Colony, In his report be refers to this matter at considerable length and points out the directions in which he considers the local Post Office Chung Chan, Thinking that probably it (b.) -The collection of correspondence from spector Craddock, accompanied by Inspectors steamers; and a quicker landing of contract mails, by means of a steam-launch be- May to bring the body to Hongkong. The gig at present maintained by the Post Office could, however, be dispensed with, which would go to reduce This is certainly required. The contract mails are now landed without any unreasonable delay, but nevertheless some time would be saved if the Post Office did its own work. The launch is, however, most required for the collection of letters from other sleamers, where there is often a notable less of time. With regard to the enforcement of the monopoly of the Post Office over outward correspondence, this is a question of revenue with bye :-which the Government are more immediately. concerned than the public. Probably Mr LISTER, in his capacity of Colonial Tressurer, has his eye on the best way of meeting the dost of development of the Postal Service with the least pressure on the taxpayer. Naturally he would, as Postmaster, like to see his department paying its own expenses; equally, as Pressurer, he would prefer that the increased cost of the Postal Administration should not have to be provided for by the Colo nial Treasury, which has already so many drains on it. No systematic attempt has yet been 124 made to compel Chinese correspondence to be sent through the Post Office. There is a very efficient outside system of delivery of Chinese letters, and any interference with this system would probably cause some trouble and feelwithin their rights in enforcing their monapoly, and the Chinese would in the end submit as we believe they did at Singapore, but having so long permitted this invasion of the Post Office suffers in revenue from the Chinese competition, and whether the secuniary benefit would compensate for the However this question may be viewed, we to be made. have no doubt the community will feel satisfied that Mr. Liszen bas at least made out a good case in favour of a reorganisation of the Postal arrangements so as to admit of a more rapid delivery of letters, and increased
